Normann Copenhagen presents Normann Cutlery designed by Aaron Probyn

Simple in its form, perfect in use. This is the essence behind Normann Cutlery, consisting of a knife, fork, tablespoon and teaspoon. Each item has been carefully designed and is perfectly balanced so that it looks attractive on the table and is perfect in use.

In developing the collection, Designer Aaron Probyn has focused on function and proportion and has created a design with a recognisable form. The archetypal knife, fork and spoon have been re-worked and been given a new well-balanced, elegant and usable design.

Aaron Probyn says: "Over the years I have collected many different cutlery ranges, for research purposes. I was always disappointed why there were weaknesses within a complete range. This led to me wanting to create a range where each piece would compliment each other visually and physically and would be the first items people would instinctively choose from their cutlery drawer. By studying other types of cutlery I discovered that cutlery is often either masculine or feminine in its expression, and I wanted to create cutlery that spoke to both sexes. Normann Cutlery is harmonious in its design, beautifully weighted, sits well in the hand and has been created to be enjoyed every day".

Normann Cutlery is available in matt steel and has been created for enjoyable occasions.
